FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

What is a municipality?

A local government below the county level comprising of a mayor and council.

Ex: Mount Pleasant, Kiawah Island, and Lincolnville are all municipalities.

In South Carolina, municipalities are either cities or towns.

Did you know?

Municipalities in South Carolina can choose to be the “City of...” or the “Town of...”

There is no minimum population to be called a city. This means some towns have higher populations than some cities.

Charleston County has 3 cities and 14 towns.

Why don't I have an election this November?

There are two reasons why you may not be able to vote in a municipal election this year:

- You live in North Charleston.
 - Municipal elections are held once every four years. The next municipal election will be in 2027.
- You don't live in a municipality.
 - Some Charleston County voters live in unincorporated areas. They do not live in a city or town. Public Service Districts, which provide water, sewage, or trash services, cover some of these areas but not all.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

My address is in a municipality. Why don't I have an election this year?

Your USPS address may indicate a city or town, but you are not necessarily within its limits or boundaries.

If you don't pay taxes to a city or town, you won't be able to vote in their elections.

What is a "donut hole"?

Some Charleston County voters live in "donut holes," or areas that are surrounded by a municipality but are not part of it.

The map below shows a "donut hole" example where an unincorporated area is bordered on all sides by the City of Charleston.

City of Charleston

Unincorporated Area

What does "at-large" mean?

When an office is elected at-large, everyone in the town or city can vote for a candidate. If the office is districted, only people living in that specific district of the town or city can vote.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

What is a runoff election?

In South Carolina, cities and towns can choose one of two methods to decide the winner of an election: majority or plurality.

Majority Elections

Majority elections can be decided in one of two ways:

- For districted offices, a candidate needs to get at least 50% of the vote plus 1 additional vote.

If two candidates are running for City Council District 2, and Candidate A receives 582 votes and Candidate B receives 581 votes, then Candidate A wins.

- For at-large offices, candidates must receive more votes than the result of this formula:

$$\text{Total number of votes} \div \text{Number of seats} \div 2$$

If 234 people voted in an at-large election, assuming three open seats:

$$234 \text{ total number of votes} \div 3 \text{ seats} \div 2 = 39$$

Each candidate needs to receive more than 39 votes to get a majority.

If no candidate gets a majority, a runoff election will be held two weeks later.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Plurality Elections

In a plurality election, the candidate does not need to get a majority of the votes.

The person with the most votes wins, regardless of whether they have over 50% of the votes. Runoffs do not occur unless there is a tie.

Majority or Plurality?

Plurality

- Awendaw

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Majority Elections - Potential Outcomes (Districted Offices)

Runoff Election

In the example below, no candidate won a majority of the voter.

The election winner would be decided in a runoff between the top two candidates, Blue and Orange.

No Runoff Election

In this next example, Red won a majority, so Red is the winner. No runoff election needed.

Runoff elections are more common in primary elections and municipal elections.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Plurality Elections - Potential Outcome

In a plurality election, the candidate with the most votes wins.

In the example to the left, Orange got 42% of the vote and the other candidates got less. Orange wins.

For plurality elections, there are no runoff elections, no matter how many candidates are running.

What is the difference between partisan and nonpartisan?

For partisan offices, candidates must be affiliated with a political party to run (unless they run as a write-in candidate).

For nonpartisan offices, candidates are not affiliated with any political party.

All municipal elections are nonpartisan.
