Arvaya AI Automations Consulting expands Charleston County operations

Job Development Incentive Program helps drive investment resulting in six new jobs.

Arvaya AI Automations Consulting, an SBE-certified and woman-owned AI and technology consulting firm, today announced plans to expand its operations in Charleston County. The company is supported by Charleston County Economic Development's new Job Development Incentive, which will help it create six new jobs over the next two years. The new positions are expected to pay an average wage of approximately $92,000.

Founded in 2025, Arvaya enables teams to use AI tools effectively across their workforce, builds connected, governed data foundations that power reporting and analytics, and cleans, migrates, and validates critical data. Arvaya works alongside clients to meet them where their biggest opportunity is, whether that's driving AI adoption, unifying scattered data, or ensuring a clean, validated migration.

The new facility at 4016 Salt Pointe Parkway in North Charleston host workshops and community education focused on responsible AI adoption alongside insights on automations that may help individuals and business owners save time in their existing work functions.

Hiring is currently underway. The company expects to hire in areas including project management, software development, data engineering, cybersecurity, training, operations, and business development. Individuals interested in joining the Arvaya team should visit the company's LinkedIn page.

QUOTES

"Companies are investing in technology, but too often their systems do not communicate, their teams are stuck in manual processes, and their data is not easy to use. Arvaya helps solve those everyday challenges by connecting their technology, automating repetitive work, and giving their teams the tools and training to make faster, better decisions. As a Charleston native, I am proud to build that work here and bring more technology, innovation, and career opportunities to the Lowcountry."

– Arvaya Founder & CEO Ashlee Jack

"We are excited to see Arvaya expand its presence in Charleston County's growing technology sector. As this industry continues to evolve, we look forward to this expansion supporting our talented workforce while giving local businesses greater access to the expertise they need to adopt and leverage emerging technologies."

– Charleston County Council Chairman Joe Boykin

"North Charleston is proud to welcome Arvaya, a woman-owned business bringing innovation, workforce development, and new opportunities to our community. We are excited to see this company grow here and look forward to the impact it will make in North Charleston."

– City of North Charleston Mayor Reggie Burgess

"Congratulations to Arvaya on its expansion in Charleston County. Our new Job Development Incentive was designed to help growing companies invest and create quality jobs here, and we are proud to see it supporting Arvaya's investment and new technology career opportunities in our community."

– Charleston County Economic Development Executive Director Merle Johnson
