Charleston County Emergency Management officials monitoring potential for winter weather impacts, making preliminary preparations

Charleston County Emergency Management officials are in close communication with the National Weather Service as the likelihood of winter weather impacts over the weekend increases.

Residents are encouraged to monitor the forecast closely in the coming days and be prepared for extreme cold temperatures and possible roadway impacts this weekend and potentially early next week.

Latest Forecast

According to the latest information from the National Weather Service, dangerously low wind chills and up to 3 inches of accumulating snowfall are expected Saturday into Sunday. While it's too soon to know the exact timing and extent of impacts, the period of greatest concern for snowfall in Charleston County is Saturday afternoon through Sunday morning.

Saturday's precipitation is expected to begin as rain and transition into snow as the temperatures drop throughout the day.

Given the extreme cold temperatures being forecast, icy roadway conditions are possible this weekend and into Monday.

County Preparations

Charleston County Public Works crews will work through the weekend assisting SCDOT in treating area roadways.

SCDOT is expected to begin pre-treating roads and bridges with brine today and will transition into salting operations when precipitation begins.

County Public Works vehicles have been fitted with salt spreaders and will be deployed Saturday with a focus on primary routes and bridges.

Additionally, emergency response resources will be pre-positioned throughout the county as a precautionary measure should travel become hazardous this weekend.

Bond Court

Due to anticipated winter weather impacts, Bond Court will hold the following remote hearings this weekend:

- 1 p.m., Saturday, January 31
- 1 p.m., Sunday, February 1

To facilitate timely hearings, law enforcement agencies are asked to scan and submit all required bond documentation to bondcourt@charlestoncounty.org by 10 a.m. on the day of the hearing.

At this time, no other operational changes have been made.

Warming Center Information
